What is practically the last large tract of vacant property in The Bronx passed into the hands of the operators yesterday when the John J. Crane estate holding, comprising 336 lots in the Port Morris section, was purchased by the United States Realty Company and the Century Realty Company. The price is said to have been something over $300,000, and, according to Robert A. Chesebrough of the Century Realty Company, it was paid in cash. Streets have been cut through the tract and graded, and the property is ready for the activities of the builder.

It is near the Third avenue elevated road and in close proximity to the line of the New Rochelle branch of the New Haven railroad, which, according to plans recently made public, is to be converted to electric traction, giving connection with the lower city by way of the Second avenue

The Crane tract was purchased in 1846 by John J. Crane of the old merchant firm of Bucklin, Crane & Co., which ran a famous of Bucklin, Crane & Co., which ran a ramous line of clipper ships to the Pacific. Mr. crane then had his city residence in Rose street, where the Brooklyn Bridge foundation now stands, and bought the property for a country place. He got it from Gouverneur Morris, who in turn had it by royal grant from George III. The present sale is the second time the deed has changed bands.

The United States Realty and Improve-The United States Realty and Improvement Company in transferring some of its capital from Manhattan to The Bronx follows the lead of the Central Realty, Bond and Irust Company, which last week acquired tracts of vacant land a little to the northeast of this section, comprising 1,704 lots, valued at more than $2,000,000. The Central Realty Bond and Trust Company turned over several blocks of their purchase before the contracts were dry and have since resold practically all of the remainder.

It was. Detective Finley told Magistrate Mayo that he had arrested the man, who gave his name as Peter Lake, on a charge of intoxication at Twenty-ninth street and Sixth avenue, in the small hours.

"I saw two negroes holding him up at the side door of a salcon," said Finley. "They were going through his pockets, but when I came in sight they ran off. The prisoner used to do that sort of business himself. So far as I know he has been respectable for a long time."

The prisoner could not hear what his captor was saying. He looked terribly anxious and opened his mouth two or three times as if to speak. His lip trembled and he couldn't get a word out. When Magistrate Mayo said "Discharged," Pete looked times as it to spear. His preferring all the couldn't get a word out. When Magistrate Mayo said "Discharged," Pete looked surprised. He would not tell where he is living now. Nobody has seen him about his old haunts for a long time. He used to be as well known in the Tenderloin as Larry Summerfield is now.
